Weather forecasters predict the 1995 hurricane season will be a busy year

By Mike Lyons

There is no such thing as a normal hurricane season.
Every year has its quirks, every season is unique and every six-month period from June 1 to Nov. 30 is full of surprises

Take last year, for example. At first glance, the 1994 hurricane season looks pretty tame. After all, only seven tropical storms formed last year with just three evolving into hurricanes. It was the fourth consecutive year that the totals fell short of the long-term average of 10 trop-ical storms and six hurri-ical storms and six hurri-canes. Yet, three storms struck Plorida including a rare November hurricane. One storm wandered around the Pacific Ocean for 31 days, a new record for longevity. Another got stuck in Georgia producing the worst flooding in that state in decades. By year's end, tropical storms and hurricanes had claimed and hurricanes had claimed over 1,000 lives and, in the United States alone, had caused nearly $1 billion in damage.

Not exactly a "tame sea-son," eh? What will the 1995 hurricane season be like? Will it be full of surprises, too? Two veteran hurricane forecasters predict that 1995 may be a busy year in the tropics.
"It looks like it will be a

To do more, however, you may have to curtail some of your outside activities. There will be time for other pursuits when you have adjusted to your expanded work load and become comfortable with your new pace.

In line with your new commitment to work, look for new tasks and responsibilities to undertake. Take a crash course through local educational institutions to become versed in something important to the company. Be the first in your department to learn a new computer program. You'll make yourself indispensable.

"What you don't want to do," Ms. Phillips says, "is to go into a shell, become depressed or become part of the rumor mill. If you remain positive, upbeat, and cheerful, management will

Professional development for teachers: The critical classroom difference

Gone are the days when teachers graduated from college fully equipped with all the skills and knowledge they would ever need for a career in the classroom. In today's info mation age, standing still is falling behind.

"Schools and students have changed significantly in recent years, but teachers are sill at the heart of instruction." says U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Riley.

"If as a nation, we expect to prepare all students for the 21st century, we must provide teachers with ongoing opportu-nities to be the most informed, the most capable, and the most inspiring classroom leaders rossible.

In support of professional development efforts aimed at improving teaching, Congress appropriated $320 million in fiscal year 1995 to broaden and improve the U.S. Department of Education's Eisenhower Pro-fessional Development State Grant Program. But the House Appropriations Committee on Labor, HHS and Education votweek to slash $1.7 billion from the Education Department budget, including $60 million targeted for professional development.

Molly Merry, Colorado's 1995
Teacher of the Year and one of only three teachers in a small public school of choice in Canon City, says it is critical that teachers spend time throughout their careers updating their teaching skills and knowledge of how children learn.

Mr. Riley says the reduction in professional development grants proposed by the House committee would severely limit

"Do you take out the same old textbook -- or throw it out and figure out a way to make learning come alive and to get your students where you want them to be? Professional development gives teachers the confidence and expertise to go for it."

At a time when many school districts are struggling finan-cially, Ms. Merry says some administrators may look to a "quick fix", turning profession-al development over to consultan'ts who sell a specific teach

"That's very short-sighted."
she says. "There's no one prefect way to teach all children. I the complex residents are pleased with its intention.

Security Captain James Jones proudly showed off a new bicycle that would be used to patrol the fence are around the complex. He said, "With this bike, we (security personnel) will have a quicker response time," when handling commotions and mishaps in and around the complex. Capt. Jones said the bike was purchased mainly to prohibit trespassers on the property.
Capt. Jones said management has spent an excess amount of dollars repairing portions of the fence. He said people not living in the com-portions of the fence. He said people not living in the complex would gain access to the property by simply climbing the fence, or bending the fence, cutting the fence, or bending the fence activation and the second many to the facility by going through the front, monitored gates. He said when security officers are on bike patrol, they can actually monitor the fence and possibly curb vandalism to it.

Dollmaker visits Rosenwald Elementary

The students of Rosenwald Elementary are among the fortunate. Many wonderful and innovative programs have come their way. The LEAP program is perhaps one of the best. Learning through Education and Art Partnerships began with a doll maker or doll artist, as she prefers to refer to herself. Klanze Haniff, doll artist extradinaire, presented the pilot project in first grade with a wonderful learning experience about the art of doll making. Children were shown steps to cre-Children were shown steps to create dolls from tracing faces on cloth, to the final product that is painted, stuffed, sewn and clothed. On exhibits were dolls that won first and second places at the Black Dollmakers Convention.

Kianza has been creating the dolls for about five years and began her craft when her daugh-ter asked her to make a doll and others admired her work. Her dolls are sold throughout the coun-try. She estimates that she has made over 2,000 dolls. Kianza also does quilting, jewelry, and she is a storyteller as well.

After her presentation on doll artistry, the first graders were given a hands-on opportunity in the making of paper doll puppets with art teacher Barbara Tyler assisting Mrs. Hamiff in the art room. The students decorated boy and grip patterns, glued clothing on them after which they were given a backing on which to be held. It was an exciting experient for students and adults alike.

The fifth grade paper age.

The fifth grade put on a mock trail for Law Day May 5. A court-room drama unfolded as the plaintiff, The Beast, was played by Domiano Francis, and the defendent, Gaston, was played by Pablo Justinano. The lawyer for the plaintiff was Christopher Felton, and the lawyer for the defense was Pauline Down A jury was summoded and the case was presented the jury ruled in favor of The Beast. It was the contention of plaintiff that he had been badly treated by Gaston in the story Beauty and the Beast.

Ladybug Shirt

GET READY ...

- One white shirt (tank top or T-shirt)
- One small glass with smooth bottom (approximately 2" in diameter)
- Red fabric paint Black shiny dimensional fabric paint
- One vanishing fabric marker Plastic lid, shirt board (or cardboard) covered with plastic wrap)

Wash and dry shirt (don't use fabric softener).
Insert shirt board or cardboard into shirt.

Place the patterns. See Photo to the left. Use bottom / of glass as a pattern to trace three ladybugs onto from of shirt with vanishing marker. To draw the ladybug trails, draw small, broken lines (approximately ¼" long) as shown Draw the heads and antennae onto bodies. Don't worry about mistakes-they'll vanish!

Paint the shirt. Squeeze a small amount of paint (about the size of a half dollar) into lid. To paint one ladybug body, gently press bottom of glass into paint, making sure bottom of glass is completely covered, then press glass over one body outline. (Hint: To prevent smearing paint, always start from the top and work downward.) Paint remaining bodies in the same way, making sure to reload paint before each application. Let dry.

To finish, use black to trace over head and antennae lines. Be sure to fill in entire head area with paint. Draw the wing lines and make the body spots. Trace over trail lines.

Wash the shirt. Turn shirt inside out. Wash in cold water, then hang to dry.

Margarine tubs make learning colors, identifying shapes, textures and size relationships fun for your little ones!

GET READY ...

- · Four colored margarine tubs with lids: green, red, blue and yellow
- · Construction paper in same colors
- · Various items in same colors
- · One black permanent marker
- · Thick craft glue.
- · Craft stick, pencil, children's rounded-point scissors

GO!

1 Cover the lids, Little crafters who have learned their scissor skills should be able to cover the lids themselves (they may need help with the lettering). To cover one lid, remove lid from tub. Turn margarine tub opening down on matching construction paper. Trace around outside of tub onto paper. Cut circle from paper. Place circle in center of lid for fit. Trim around edges if necessary. Use marker to write color of container on lid. Use craft stick to spread glue on back of lid cover. Press cover onto lid. Make remaining lid covers-

Start the seek and find! Have the child fill each container with items such as crayons, small plastic pencil sharpeners, plastic blocks, colored beads, plastic animals, scraps of fabric or other items that match their colored tubs. Children will have lots of fun trying to fill their containers with items of matching colors The search to fill the tubs may take a while . . . but that's the fun of it! When the tubs are filled with items of different sizes, shapes and textures, ask the child comprehension questions relating to the items, such as: "Which one of these items is smooth and which feels fuzzy?", "Which of these two items is larger?" and "What would you use this for?" The learning opportunities are endless!
